

Directions for Wheel of Life Chart

Rate each category on the Wheel on a scale of 0 to 10:

10—You couldn't be more satisfied with where you are at this point in your life. You are right on track.

5—It's OK, but there are some changes that you could make here and feel more satisfied.

0—There is no fulfillment in this area. You would be much happier if everything about this category was different.

You can split a piece of the Wheel into two parts if you want to. For example, you could split the "fun and friends" section down the middle and rate each individually. The ranking shows how satisfied you are with that particular piece of your life; the situation doesn't have to be perfect for you to be satisfied.

___ Family. Split into extended and nuclear family if you wish.

___ Physical Environment. Split into work and home if you wish.

___ Fun and Friends. Split into two separate pieces if you wish.

___ Personal Growth. This can be about work, spirituality, and/or special interest.

___ Money. This can include income, savings, retirement, debts and spending habits.

___ Health. How healthy do you feel? Consider weight, level of fitness, energy levels, diet, health awareness, being up-to-date on exams, etc.

___ Significant Other/Romance. How satisfied are you with the relationship that you have or don't have? You may be completely satisfied even if you aren't in a romantic relationship.

___ Career. Consider your career selection, direction and current work.

We get a complete picture of your life by translating the numbers that you wrote above onto the Wheel of Life Chart on the next page. If you wrote down a 10 for a category, make a line along the outer edge of the circle. If you wrote down a 5 in a category, make a line across the piece about halfway between the outer edge of the circle and the center. If you have a 0 in a category, draw a small line right by the center point where all the pieces meet.

Goals and Commitments*

With a goal, there is a specific point in time by which you either have or have not accomplished it. It is measurable and specific. Either you have increased your income by 30% by July 31 or you have not.

A commitment is different from a goal in that it is an ongoing quality-of-life shift. A commitment is not measurable. It may have to do with the state or quality of being you want to create in your life. “I am committed to making a difference in the world through my work,” “I am committed to having open communication with my children,” or “I am committed to a healthful lifestyle and a fit body” are all examples of commitments. Using the Wheel of Life as your guide, identify your goals (with specific due dates) and your commitments.

Your Future

What is your vision for the next five to 10 years? What would you like your life to be like five to 10 years from today? If you are not clear, don't overthink this and just list what first comes to mind. Sketch out the outlines of the life you would like. Think big! Plan as if you could not fail. What would it be like personally, socially, physically, professionally, and /or spiritually? Where would you live? Whom would you be with? Remember this wisdom: we tend to overestimate what we can do in a year; we tend to underestimate what we can do in five to 10 years.

Ten-year vision:

Five-year vision: Where do you need to be at the halfway point to your 10-year vision?

One-year vision: Looking at your 10-year vision and your 5-year vision, what must you accomplish this year? How will your life be balanced? Take time to make this as tangible as you can.

List several long-term goals that are in alignment with your 10-year vision.

What are a few burning short-term goals that you want to achieve over the next 90-120 days?
